BEST PRACTICES

❖ 1. TITLE OF THE PRACTICE: Helping Hands (Home for Destitute Blind - Kerala Federation of the Blind & Grace Palliative Care)

Our institution extends a helping hand to patients on their journey through illness, aiming to alleviate suffering and ensure dignity, comfort, and a sense of control. Healthcare practitioners focus on improving the quality of life for individuals with serious illnesses. The departments of the KMCT College of Allied Health Sciences have collaborated with Grace Palliative Care and the Kerala Federation of the Blind to provide training for our institute's interns.

2. OBJECTIVES OF THE PRACTICE:

1. Encompass an integrated approach that addresses needs on all levels, going beyond simple medical care.
2. Help patients maintain independence, engage in joyful activities, and have meaningful interactions with loved ones.
3. Aid patients in receiving primary healthcare and avoid unnecessary hospitalization.
4. Keep lines of communication open with families to enable educated decisions and future planning.

3. THE CONTEXT:

1. Help is provided at any stage of illness, regardless of its curability.
2. Provide dignity and support to patients and their families, enabling independent decision-making during challenging times.
3. Regular volunteer assistance is required, and a team must be organized with empathy and a sense of humanity.

4. THE PRACTICE:

Interns from our institute's department participate in a rotational training program at the Kerala Federation of the Blind (KFB) and Grace Palliative Care. Each batch of interns spends one week at a time at KFB and Grace, with 3-4 interns in each batch. This mandatory seven-day posting allows interns to engage in both inpatient and outpatient activities at the palliative center. A resource person from the institute monitors and guides the interns at the center. In the outpatient area, interns provide necessary measures and instructions under the supervision of the palliative team. During inpatient sessions, they monitor and assess the patient's condition. Additionally, interns conduct one home visit per week for terminally ill patients.

5. EVIDENCE OF SUCCESS:

Students who receive palliative care training are better equipped to address the challenges faced by patients with serious illnesses. Effective communication with patients and their families is emphasized. This posting section encourages collaboration and fosters a more holistic and patient-centered care environment.

6. PROBLEMS ENCOUNTERED AND RESOURCES REQUIRED:

In the initial stages of the posting, there were misunderstandings from both students and patients/families. Students were initially unable to make their point, but with the help of the palliative team members, the problems were resolved.

❖ 2. TITLE OF THE PRACTICE: Differently Abled (Pratheeksha & Composite Regional Centre for Skill Development Rehabilitation and Empowerment of Persons with Disabilities - CRC)

To embrace and empower differently abled individuals, promoting inclusivity, dispelling myths, and providing equal opportunities, KMCT CAHS, in collaboration with Pratheeksha and CRC, imparts various skills to enable them to carry out daily tasks independently. This fosters self-acceptance within the family and society, assisting them in achieving self-sufficiency.

OBJECTIVES OF THE PRACTICE:

1. Provide support services to help individuals develop their skills and achieve their goals.
2. Encourage self-advocacy to empower differently abled individuals to express their needs and advocate for themselves.
3. Promote positive attitudes that focus on abilities rather than disabilities.
4. Provide training in various fields to equip them with knowledge and skills.

THE CONTEXT:

1. Conduct needs assessments to identify disabilities and challenges faced by the target group.
2. Focus on developing life skills, social skills, and communication skills of the patients.
3. Adopt a patient and empathetic teaching approach that encourages participation and builds confidence.
4. Create individual education plans for each participant, outlining their learning goals, strengths, challenges, and required support equipment.
5. Involve patients' family members and caregivers in the training process.

THE PRACTICE:

Our collaborative endeavour exemplifies a holistic strategy to enhance the lives of differently abled individuals, focusing on their health, skill development, and social integration. Interns from our institution participate in a rotational training program at the center. These training programs help them develop specific vocational skills and enhance their overall quality of life. Additionally, identifying needs and implementing appropriate measures demonstrate a proactive approach to healthcare, crucial for maintaining the well-being of the participants. Empowering them with knowledge for better practices in their daily lives is a crucial step towards long-term health improvement.

EVIDENCE OF SUCCESS:

Students have shown increased enthusiasm and improved interaction skills when dealing with patients with disabilities. They are better prepared to handle challenges encountered during the training period, enhancing their ability to choose, recognize, and provide efficient training approaches. This posting section has also helped develop the emotional and social skills of students in interacting with others in the community and society.

PROBLEMS ENCOUNTERED AND RESOURCES REQUIRED:

Initially, students faced challenges in approaching patients with cognitive problems and had doubts about their own abilities. However, with continuous training and support, they were able to handle a variety of situations. They were equipped to boost the confidence of both patients and their relatives. Ongoing resources such as training materials, specialized equipment, and support from the partnering organizations are essential to sustain and further enhance the practice.

Overall, these institutional best practices, "Helping Hands" and "Differently Abled," have demonstrated their effectiveness in addressing the needs and empowering individuals in their respective contexts. The collaborative efforts with external organizations have provided valuable training opportunities for interns, resulting in improved patient care and holistic approaches to healthcare.

To sustain and further enhance these practices, ongoing support, resources, and partnerships are crucial. This includes continuous training for students, access to specialized equipment and materials, and coordination with external organizations. Regular evaluations and feedback mechanisms can also help identify areas for improvement and ensure that these best practices continue to evolve and meet the ever-changing needs of the individuals being served.

In conclusion, the institutional best practices of "Helping Hands" and "Differently Abled" exemplify the commitment of our institution to provide compassionate and inclusive healthcare. These practices not only benefit the individuals directly involved but also contribute to the overall well-being of the community. By focusing on holistic care, skill development, and social integration, we can create a more inclusive and empathetic society. It is through such initiatives that we can truly make a difference and empower those in need.

Subject: Collaboration Announcement - KMCT College's Commitment to the Differently-abled

Dear Students,

We are thrilled to share a significant partnership update. In November 2018, KMCT College of Allied Health Sciences established a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with Pratheeksha Special School in Manassery and Grace Palliative Care Center in Mukam, to bettering the lives of differently-abled and disabled individuals within our community.

Starting now, KMCT College will actively engage in various events and initiatives that aim to uplift those facing unique challenges due to disabilities. We're deeply committed to fostering a more inclusive and empathetic society.

Your active participation and cooperation are invaluable in achieving these shared goals. Together, we can make a real impact on those who need it most.

Thank you for joining us on this journey toward a more compassionate community.
